Life With Clay

Life With Clay is a blog containing “a father's journal of the day-to-day journey with a son who has autism”.

Clay and his wonderfully supportive family, Larry and Roe, have been utilizing FC for about a year now, and we've been working with them about once a month since last August when they really got going. His progress and strides have been quite remarkable. This is a blog his father, Larry, started re: their journey.
